

#TinyRevolutions – saying thank you

People all across the UK joined in the thanks to carers and the NHS with #clapforNHS and #clapforcarers. We have also been leaving messages of support for those on their way to work in hospitals.

Liz Wright, director of Blystra Arts in Newquay, Cornwall sent us these images.

“Please find attached the picture of Ruan (5) and Aila (3) finding creativity in all the chaos, we wanted to create a message for all the NHS staff who come down our street heading to the frontline to keep us safe. We have close friends and family who are nurses and we wanted to let them and the millions of others know how much we appreciate all they are doing.”

We know that most people found out about #clapforNHS online – if you know of another public event coming up that has been shared grown online, perhaps a chaked message for neighbours who are OFFline will help them join in another time?
